Market commentary

A number of central banks including the US, Canada, UK, and Norway increased interest rates in the third quarter contributing to a lowering bond prices. Concerns from the EU over the new Italian government's budget added to the volatility of their equity and bond prices. A sharp rise in Italian yields contributed to an underperforming Eurozone. US Corporate bonds performed well this quarter spurred on by robust economic growth and earnings data. Gilt yields rose across the board as the market predicted more rate hikes. Equity markets were mixed through the third quarter. US equities continued to outperform and saw records broken with the longest American bull market ever. Political uncertainty and trade concerns meant that global equity performance was varied. UK equities lagged in part due to struggling Brexit talks. European markets in general underperformed, but indicators are pointing towards future economic growth. Asia Pacific equities were more resistant to their political, trade and monetary policy worries. Further interest rate increases are being predicted post-Brexit after an increase in inflation in August that was higher than previously projected.
