Market commentary

The trend for central banks to tighten monetary policy continued in the second quarter. US interest rates rose in June and the European Central Bank reduced their bond purchases. In the UK an interest rate rise was widely expected in May but poor economic data meant this did not materialise. The expectation of a rise soon resurfaced and a rate rise is again considered likely. Both long dated corporate bonds and Gilts saw falls over the quarter. Over the last 12 months Gilts have notably outperformed returning around 4% vs. 0.5% for long dated corporates. This reflects increasing trade tensions and slow progress on Brexit discussions with Europe.
